“People will not look forward to posterity, who never look backwards to their ancestors”, said Edmund Burke in his famous book, entitled, Reflections on the Revolution in France (1790)

What is history?

History is the analysis and interpretation of the human past enabling us to study continuity and changes that are taking place over time. It is an act of both investigation and imagination that seeks to explain how people have changed over time.

"Imagination is more important than knowledge.
Knowledge is limited.
Imagination encircles the world."

-Albert Einstein

- History is a study of the present in the light of the past
- History is the study of man and woman
- History is concerned with man in time
- History is concerned with man in space
- History is the objective record of happenings
- History is multisided
- History is a dialogue between the events of the past and progressively emerging future ends.
- History is not only narration but also analysis
- History repeats itself
- Comprehensiveness

History Repeats Itself

Why History?

- History is about roots. It connects us with our past. History also allows us to peer into the future by providing precedents for contemporary action, forewarning against the repetition of past mistakes.
- From its sense of continuity, history offers apparent form and purpose to past, present and future.

- Herodotus was the first writer to perform systematic investigation of historical events.
- Herodotus is referred to as ‘The Father of History’.

Autobiography
as a source of history:

Conclusion :

- A good history describes chronologically and analyzes convincingly a sequence of events and shows why one event led to another.
- Important questions in history are not centered around description, but concern analysis (Black and MacRaild, 2000).
